

Andrew Schoultz mural at Mark Moore Gallery

Posted by erwin on September 13, 2012

On a bright sunny day in Culver City, Andrew Schoultz stood armed with a ladder and paintbrush. The San Francisco artist is transforming the outer wall of Mark Moore Gallery into his own artistic vision. The large brick wall serves as a canvas for his distinct style, one that consists of an impressive amount of detail. His recurring images of horses, flags, eyes and more come to life through works that are complex both from afar and up close. This is the artist's first Los Angeles mural and you can swing by the gallery to see the whole image unfold. Look out for his solo exhibit and for an upcoming CARTWHEEL interview with the artist. – Eva Recinos

Source: <http://www.cartwheelart.com/news/andrew-schoultz-mural-at-mark-moore-gallery>

