

Edith Green-Wendell Wyatt federal building

Published: May 29, 2013 - Portland, OR

Beth Nakamura/The Oregonian

Artist Tim Bavington turned sound waves from the song "Louie Louie" by The Kingsmen into a colorful sculpture that dominates the wall of the main entrance into the building. The Kingsmen were a Portland band. Although they did not write the song, their recording of it remains a rock classic. Sen. Ron Wyden toured the newly renovated Edith Green-Wendell Wyatt federal building in downtown Portland Wednesday morning, a day before it opens to the public. Sen. Ron Wyden said during a tour Wednesday that Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid asked him to check out the sculpture; Reid is a fan of the artist's work in Las Vegas.

Source:

http://photos.oregonlive.com/4450/gallery/sen\_ron\_wyden\_tours\_newly\_renovated\_edith\_green-wendell\_wyatt\_federal\_building/index.html#/6