

Interview: Kathy Grayson of THE HOLE NYC

BY NICK SCHONBERGER | OCT 24, 2011 | 9:36 AM | PERMALINK

Known for her work at pioneering gallery Deitch Projects, Kathy Grayson is now director of her own project, the fast rising HOLE NYC. She's been busy outside of NYC as well, most recently working on The Green Box Project down in Miami.

Her first curatorial project in the digital realm, Green Box brought her previous "Facemaker" exhibition (which ran at RoyalT in Los Angeles in April of 2011) to video format. Four artists join the fold — Ben Jones, Allison Schulnik, Takeshi Murata, and Mat Brinkman — each occupying a side of the Green Box cube.

The exhibition ran from September 30 to October 12, 2011.