The Mark Moore Gallery in Culver City, California, has announced that it is to represent Los-Angeles-based painter Lester Monzon, whose first exhibition with the gallery is to begin on 14 September.

In this show, Monzon applies this critique of contextual art practices and assimilation to mark-making in public spaces; be it graffiti on tiles in a public bathroom, stains on the sidewalk, or the popularized notion of "street art."

Monzon was born in Brooklyn in 1973, and holds a M.F.A. from the Art Center College of Design (CA). His work has been displayed at the Wignall Museum of Contemporary Art (California), and as part of exhibitions held in San Francisco, Chicago, and Los Angeles.
