This just in from Lipscomb art prof Rocky Horton: On Oct. 7 at 6 p.m., Lipscomb University will host an art opening for Joshua Dildine. Why should you pay attention? Because Dildine makes work that will grab you — think late-'90s Mark Romanek video stills overpainted by Jose Parla or Harmony Korine — but also because Lipscomb secretly harbors one of the hippest art programs in Nashville, name-checking Daniel Johnston and Nick Cave among its recent visitors.

"Stand Your Way to Hellness," Joshua Dildine

"Having a Bad Day Again," Joshua Dildine

"Prepared to be Floored," Joshua Dildine

"In Good Company," Joshua Dildine

"Life Well L.A.," Joshua Dildine
